Headteacher's Notes

Dear Parents and Carers,

The weekend is here again – time is flying by and it is astonishing to think that the children are more than halfway through the academic year. The days are getting longer and the sun is definitely shining more - we have lots to be grateful for.

This week, in our Tuesday assembly I told the inspirational story of poet and activist Maya Angelou from the amazing book 'Bold Women in Black History'. The book tells the stories of courageous, inspirational woman from all around the world who strive to succeed in their chosen field. The women we meet through our book have all had to face challenges in pursuit of their dreams. The children are brilliant listeners who show kind, genuine curiosity about other people's lives. They listened attentively to the challenges that Maya faced in her early life and how she embraced opportunities to become a global success. Next week, I will be sharing the story of Mary Seacole – I wonder if you can help your child to do some research before the assembly? I hope so!

On Wednesday, we hosted a Governors' Morning. On this visit, a number of representatives from our governing body visited our early years department – our nursery and reception classes. The governors were blown away by the teaching and learning that they witnessed and had lots of questions for staff and children. Visiting lessons is one of the highlights of my job – watching our reception and nursery children learning was truly magical. I feel very lucky that our governors are so proactive and really want to get to know our children and ensure that we are supported and challenged in our journey to ensure that children get the very best opportunities to succeed at Robins Lane.

Yesterday, we sent out a staffing update to inform you of changes in roles and responsibilities that will be in place following the Easter break. Please take time to read this information – if you haven't seen it, please let office staff know. I will ensure a copy is uploaded to our Facebook page.

Next week, we have a very busy week in school and I have heard a rumour that the Easter Bunny might be popping in for breakfast on Wednesday... Watch this space!

Please can I issue a final reminder for our parents' survey. Your views are crucial as our school moves forward and I am keen to hear from as many people as possible to ensure that voices are heard.

Have a relaxing, restful weekend and make the most of the great outdoors and spending quality time together as a family.

Yours sincerely,

Mrs Tomkow
